To Whom It May Concern,

I am pleased to offer this letter of recommendation for Dr. James Cecy, a distinguished leader, educator, and communicator whose career spans decades of service, mentorship, and global impact. I have known James for 5 years and have participated regularly in an online forum of ministry leaders. I have grown to value his friendship, his counsel, and his wisdom.

Dr. Cecy brings a rare combination of strategic insight, interpersonal warmth, and unwavering integrity to every endeavor. His background includes service in the U.S. Navy during the Vietnam War, followed by a long and respected career in organizational leadership and public speaking. He has served as the Senior Leader of a large nonprofit organization for nearly three decades, where he has consistently demonstrated excellence in team development, cross-cultural training, and executive management.

James holds advanced degrees in communication and leadership, including a Doctor of Ministry focused on ethical leadership and organizational resilience. His research into the causes of moral failure among leaders has informed seminars and training programs that have reached hundreds of thousands of individuals across five continents. His book, The Purity War, is seen as a valuable resource offering practical advice on upholding personal and professional integrity, especially in demanding situations.

Beyond his academic and professional credentials, James is a gifted communicator. His ability to connect with diverse audiences, whether in North America, Asia, Africa, or Europe—has made him a sought-after speaker and consultant. He is known for his clarity, empathy, and ability to distill complex ideas into actionable insights.

I recommend Dr. James Cecy without reservation for any role that requires principled leadership, global perspective, and a commitment to excellence. He would be an asset to any organization seeking to elevate its culture, strengthen its leadership, or expand its reach.

Sincerely,

Rev. Stephen Ekeroth
